Lunarpages Web Hosting was born from Add2Net in 2000, and our company continues to be managed by Ron Riddle and has never been traded or compromised since its humble beginnings. Several years ago, Ron and the company branched out from simple shared hosting to include Windows, Dedicated, Reseller, and most recently, VPS Hosting Plans. With two datacenters (one in Los Angeles, California and one in Las Vegas, Nevada), an optimized call center in La Habra, California, and several satellite technicians in various parts of the United States, Lunarpages is the premier web host in the world, hosting over 100,000 satisfied customers with more than 100 staff members worldwide. They truly love what they do and have never compromised our security, management, pricing, or services, while constantly remaining competitive to the industry's ever-changing atmosphere.

As a new customer, they welcome you to the fold instantly and you can be sure that any problems you may have will be handled quickly and efficiently. As none of our technicians are outsourced, you can be assured that they are not cutting corners to try and save a few bucks – they are well-established and well-regarded as the biggest, most secure host in the industry. Although Lunarpages is a driving force and They are responsible for some major influences and changes in the hosting industry, above all they will never lose our close-knit feel and attitude because our connections with each other and our community are the reason for our success. Lunarpages isn't simply a hosting company. They are a family.
